

Hazardous Hydrologic Processes on the East-Asian Rivers and Related Research Goals

Alexei N. Makhinov<sup>1</sup>, Liu Shuguang<sup>2</sup>, Vladimir I. Kim<sup>1</sup> and Alexandra F. Makhinova<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Institute of Water and Ecology Problems, Far Eastern Branch of Russian Academy of Sciences, 65 Kim Yu Chen str., Khabarovsk 680000, Russia, amakhinov@mail.ru

<sup>2</sup>Tongji University, Shanghai, China, liusgliu@tongji.edu.cn

Abstract

Various hydrologic processes on big rivers of East Asia are discussed as negatively affecting economic activities near the rivers. Natural specifics in the north (Russian) and south (Chinese) part of the region are considered.

Keywords: Amur River, directed sediment accumulation, erosion, floods, riverbed processes, Yangtze River